Excerpt: . CHAPTER VI KAMAKURA AND ENOSHIMA The nearest provincial point of interest to the port of Yokohama is the ancient city of Kamakura, which owes its historical fame to Yoritomo, the founder of the Shogunate, who chose it for his capital in 1192. For generations prior to that time the high-spirited aristocracy of Japan, tired of the effeminacy of the Mikado's court, had seethed with impatient desire for more manly dominion. Eventually this unrest broke out into open warfare between the two greatest families in the land--the Taira and Minamoto clans--and during the latter half of the eleventh and the whole of the twelfth century the heads of these clans alternately rose to almost Imperial power, as the fortunes of war favoured the one or the other. Yoritomo, a scion of the illustrious house of Minamoto, was born in 1147, and thirty-eight years...
