Not illustrated. 1885 Excerpt: .of Kaufman and SchilfHe, and the Christian principles of the Society for Promoting Working Men s Associations, the measures of reform I am about to explain are founded. Of the many laws given to the children of Israel by Moses for their social guidance, one commanded that they should do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure. Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin shall ye have. Here we have laid down a high moral standard of exchange. It is by the establishment of a higher moral standard of exchange than is possible under existing free and individual competition that the corner-stone of a remedial measure will be laid. I therefore recommend agency associations for the retail distribution of the products of kindred trades, it being a principle and condition of their foundation that they be established as an aid to production on the one hand and a protection to the consumer on the other. These Co-operative Associations or Agencies would perform the twofold function for the mutual benefit of producers and consumers in the following manner: --I. The share capital would be raised on the joint stock principle, with limited liability, in shares of sufficiently small amount to place them within the means of purchase by the industrial classes. II. The management would be vested in a sufficiency but not a superfluity of directors--a managing director and a secretary. Their election and re-election being of course vested...
