Not illustrated. 1846 Excerpt: .of that whole ountry, intricate and wild as they are, are clear to my d; I have studied them thoroughly, and venture to y, that future surveys, if conducted by competent Enneers, will corroborate what I here do affirm, and hat has been ascertained to be facts. An inspection of Mr. Schlatters map will show that ft he Kishicoquillas route forms an abrupt bend at the mouth of Mill creek. To cut this ofT, and to effect a fferther saving of distance of 11 23 miles, is the object of the Stone Mountain route. This line forms a succession of 45 feet grades, and is, for about one half of its istance, located over exceedingly difficult ground. A rmel of 1 06 miles long through Stone Mountain, and veral extensive and high viaducts become necessary, gainst these works the principal objections have been aised but why. has not been explained. If long tunnels and high viaducts are serious objections in themselves, then one half of the railways in.England, and on the Continent of Europe must be pronounced flat failures, because they abound in these Jvery features. Tunnels in those countries are not only Resorted to from necessity, but more frequently for the jptirpose of straightening lines, saving a little distance nd expense. High and extensive viaducts may be iseen there, stretching across valleys, rivers, and even pver populous towns; the traveler delights to ride over ihm, as if through the air, knowing them to be just...
