This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: .of technical literature. Concurrently a reference service will produce exhaustive lists of abstracts of previously published information. A complete record of data will be assembled in card encyclopedia form, and available for reference upon occasion. This encyclopedia will also be the depository of much unpublished material from the subscribers own laboratories and libraries. In this work emphasis shall be placed upon the physical and chemical properties of pure metal and alloys, the methods of measurement and analysis, alloying methods, and service tests. Such an organization should have much more than the subscription value to companies intelligently attempting to increase the quality and uses of alloys, to research associations, technical libraries and colleges. It will attempt to co-operate with existing agencies performing such a service in a more limited way, such as the British Institute of Metals.--(Chem. and Metallurgical Engineering, December 29, 1920, p. 1271.)...
